This is good news. Internet is the world's largest network, with over 500 million active users. Internet plays a critical role in every aspect of people's lives. People use the Internet to read news, to watch videos, to shop online, and to contact friends and family. It is a platform for creativity and self-expression, and a great source of information. Internet use has increased in Asia, Africa, and South America, where one-third of the world's population now access the Internet, with mobile phones used as the primary means of Internet access. Asia leads the world in Internet use, especially in the Middle East, which is the home of the world's largest Internet market. The Internet is also rapidly growing in Latin America, North America, and Europe. In Europe, there are currently nearly 170 million Internet users, up from 62 million in 2007. Internet use is concentrated in urban areas. In urban areas, over half of the world's households have Internet access, compared to a third in rural areas. As of March 2017, 2.6 billion people, nearly one-third of the world's population, now have access to the Internet, about three times more than ten years ago. The fastest growth is in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. There are about 5.7 billion mobile phone subscriptions in the world, equivalent to more than half of the world's population. The number of mobile subscriptions is estimated to double every year. Internet use is growing rapidly with a mobile phone subscription, with more and more people accessing the Internet through mobile phones. As of May 2016, only 63% of people use the Internet at home, and 33% of people use the Internet at work. The percentage of people who do not use the Internet at

"keymacro" is used to define a keyboard macro, which is simply a sequence of keyboard keys (usually composed of one or more letters, but can be any combination of keys). "keymacro" has two key parts: the text of the macro, and the sequence of keyboard keys used to perform the macro. The macro text and the keyboard sequence are separated by a semicolon. The text of the macro can contain any text. The keyboard sequence can contain any number of keyboard keys. Macros can be nested and can have arguments, as shown below. Use "keymacro" to: - Create and edit macros, just by typing the text of the macro. - Execute a macro at any time you like (macros are also called action macros). - Program the keyboard to execute macro. Example: "$USERNAME" and "@" when pressed simultaneously: _ type a "@" (keyboard). _ type "username". Example: _ type an "@" and "@" together: $USERNAME and "@" to type the username. _ type the "@" to execute the macro. "keymacro" can be used in any Word-processing or HTML editor. Each macro can be defined to perform any sequence of keyboard actions: ¶ "keymacro" can be used to define any sequence of keyboard actions. By default, macros are tied to a text entry window. If you want a macro to be executed automatically on the entire document, choose "Document" from the context menu in the macro window, and "Edit" from the context menu. Note: To have the macro start every time you start a new document, select "File" from the context menu, and then choose "New Document". Example: _ type an "@" and "@" together to type the "username". _ type the "@" to execute the macro. _ type "username". _ type a "@" to type a "username". Example: _ type "a" to type "@". _ type a "@" to type a "username". _ type "b" to type "@". _ type a "@" to type "username". Examples: _ type a "@" and "@" together to type the "username". _ type the "@" to execute the macro. _ type "username". _ type " 77a5ca646e
